Hopefuls debate issues

by
Robert P. Borquez
Brian J. Anders

The four nominees for Student Association president addressed student policies, S.A. budget priorities and campus media during a debate Tuesday night.

Michael Lennon said that his positions as chairman of the S.A. Facilities Committee, a member of the Board of Trustees Facilities Committee and his activities in various S.A. ad hoc committees qualify him to serve as p-resident.

Brian Rooke described his experiences as S.A. vice president as being his greatest asset. "Against my experience as vice president, it would take my competition one year to qualify (for president)." Rooke cited the 17 committees with which he has been involved during the past year.

Joe Blanco listed a long record of involvement in student government. He was active for four years in high school and spent one year in Spain organizing the first legal student government in 40 years at the University of Madrid. Blanco also served as S.A. vice-president and president at Scottsdale Community College in Arizona, managing a budget of approximately $500,000.

Blanco attacked the incumbent executive board's handling of concerts, saying, "There is no way you should ever lose $2,000 on a concert."

Michael Conway said that his main qualifications include his tenure as junior class president, involvement in house government, position on the Student Life Advisory Council, and membership on various senate committees.

He pointed out personality clashes as being one problem he would aim to alleviate if elected.

Communication is the greatest problem confronting the campus, according to Lennon. "I think that we have a communication problem . . . say, between the Student Association and your (the Michaelman) newspaper."

P-Day activities should be expanded, according to Blanco. He added that "a concert should be more productive . . . and I think the expense is well worth it."

Conway believes that more student input is needed on the formulation of a housing policy. He is "irked" by the proposed increases in housing fees for "preferential living" (i.e., Democratic houses, Christian Living Center, etc.), saying, "The students do all the work and then the school charges them more to live there."

Lennon said an S.A. recognized publication, such as the Road Apple, should be required to get recognition by the Media Board and the board of trustees in order to get senate funding.

"If they get money from the senate, I don't see why they should not be subject to the same rules as any other senate organization," he added.

A grievance committee should be established to which students can complain about classes in which they believe they're not learning anything, according to Blanco. "I think it is the responsibility and right of every student to evaluate his teachers."

The mistakes of the controversial Aztec-Two-Step concert can be avoided, Conway said, by not tying concerts to other activities and by directing more attention toward scheduling.

Rooke defended the Marchi administration's handling of the concert, saying there is little chance of funding a concert independently due to the tight S.A. budget.

He also attributed the financial losses of Aztec-Two-Step to the coverage it received from the Michaelman.

Blanco was more optimistic about the future of campus concerts, saying, "From my experience with concerts over the last few years, I have found that a concert should be a positive, and not a negative thing . . . I think it is the student government's responsibility to make sure there is media coverage."

Lennon was skeptical about the possibility of publishing the yearbook on a subscription basis, saying that he wasn't sure that subscription sales could underwrite the costs.

When parietal policy was discussed, Conway said the fact that St. Michael's is a Catholic college is crucial. But he is satisfied with the present guest policy on campus.

After saying that the senate should exert no editorial control over campus media, Lennon added, "I don't think your (the Michaelman) paper, because it is funded by the senate, has the right to go against senate policies."

Blanco admitted that the relationship between the campus media and the student senate is a "controversial issue." "I would like to see the paper separated . . . from the hands of the student government" and endorsed the idea of financial matters being handled by the public tion board. He also said he would expect the media to act in a responsible manner and express more than one side on an issue.

Conway stressed the importance of an indedpendent media, saying the recently ratified Michaelman constitution provides safeguards for

Flu sweeps campus

If you have been wandering around campus for the past few days with coughing fits and an aching shoulder, chances are your nights have been spent in the agony of high fever.

These symptoms, along with nasal congestion and soreness of the throat, are common to a strain of illness called the Texas Flu. The flu, which comes on very suddenly and is extremely contagious, has reached epidemic proportions on campus and throughout the state.

According to Jane Campbell, head nurse at the college infirmary, 103 student cases were recorded last Sunday during a four hour period.

Considering the contagious properties of the virus as well as the "communal" status of the college community, spread of the flu has been rapid and complete.

A number of measures have been taken to ease the suffering caused by the virus, including the distribution of aspirin and cough medicine by the infirmary and orange juice by resident assistants.

The only sure "cure" of the illness, Campbell said, is to let the bug run its course, a period of time which averages three to four days.

"By the end of the week," Campbell said "you should start feeling fine again."

Compared to last year's epidemic, the number of illnesses have not reached a serious point. Last year, there were rumors that, due to the widespread virus, the administration would close the college for a period of time.

This year, though the seven beds in the infirmary are all occupied by more severe cases, the peak day of the illness is considered to have passed with no serious consequence.

The cooperation of Saga, resident assistants and the fellowship of the students themselves, Campbell said, have provided for the reduction of individual suffering.

Still in the near future, though, the well known Russian flu has yet to make its impact on St. Michael's. The virus shows comparable symptoms.

News briefs

Persons interested in applying for resident assistant positions for the 1978-79 academic year should contact Lewis M. Whitney in the Student Life Office, Jemery, for additional information. Approximately nine to 15 positions are available.

Applications are now being accepted for editor-in-chief of the 1979 yearbook. Anyone interested in the position should contact Peter Mullen, extension 2668. The deadline for applications is March 15.

Vermont Educational Television presents live, color coverage of the contest between longtime basketball rivals Assumption College and St. Michael's from the Ross Sports Center. Starting time is 7:30 p.m. Saturday. Jack Barry is play-by-play announcer. Steve Reiter is color commentator.

Fire, rescue to profit from dance

The St. Michael's Jazz Band will perform in a benefit dance tonight in Alliot cafeteria.

The event, benefitting the college's fire and rescue squads, is being sponsored by the Crown and Sword Society.

Traditional refreshments including wine, punch and beer will be served. The dance is open to students and faculty members.

The dance is part of the society's induction process which has been underway for the past two weeks and has included such activities as a smoker and toboggan party.

Final interviews will be held Sunday for all sophomores and transfer juniors interested in joining.

Two constitutions passed by senate

by Brian Anders

Constitutions for both the Michaelman and Hilltop were approved with little dissent by the student senate at their shortened Feb. 14 meeting.

The Michaelman document had been tabled last week, pending some changes in the wording. These changes were explained by News Editor Robert Borquez. When the vote was taken, only one person opposed.

Peter Mullen, editor for the 1978 yearbook, submitted its constitution. According to Mullen, "It is not very extensive, but it covers the organization."

The one significant change is in the process of selecting the editor-in-chief. The editor was formally nominated by the senior class president and approved by the media board.

The new document provides for selection by the current board of editors. Denise Corbett then asked if it was possible that an underclassman could be editor and Mullen said it was possible if that person were the best qualified.

Also, the post is set up so that there is no possibility of co-editors.

In other business, Brian Rooke removed his motion that would have set up what amounts to stipends for committee chairmen. He said he was doing so reluctantly.

An attack on the plan was delivered by the Student Life Committee. At its meeting on Feb. 9, it unanimously passed a statement of disapproval of the measure.

Its position was submitted to the senate at the meeting. The document stated, "The committee does not support a salary for chairpersons for personal use in any way, manner, shape, or form."

According to John Moran, General Services and Welfare chairman, there is no one running for the posts of junior class president and vice president.

In announcing the names of the candidates for all the offices, Moran said no one had filed a petition with the required number of signatures. He will leave two spaces on the ballot for write-in votes.

St. Michael's to sponsor 13th academy symposium

by Marie Meunier

The Vermont Academy of Arts and Sciences will hold its 13th intercollegiate symposium on Saturday, April 15, 1978 at St. Michael's College, according to Asst. Prof. F.N. Clary, Jr., symposium chairman.

Students may submit works in literary criticism, the natural sciences, the social sciences, fiction and poetry, Clary said. Papers submitted may include independent research as well as papers done as part of course work.

Certificates of recognition will be awarded by the academy to each student whose work is selected for presentation and discussion, Clary said.

Outstanding presentations will be published in the academy's Occasional Paper whose subscribers include Harvard University and the University of Wisconsin.

Selection will be based on content, organization and style. Submitted copy should be typed, double-spaced and should not exceed 10 to 12 pages. Longer versions may be compressed. Compressed versions should be submitted along with the original longer version. Overhead and 2 inch by 2 inch projection equipment will be available, said Clary.

Deadline for submission is March 24, 1978. Students will be notified of the selection committee's decision by April 3, 1978 along with the time and place for their reading.

To submit research papers, students should send a complete copy of their work with title, name, college, year and mailing address to: (literature) Prof. Jean Davison, Dept. of Classics, UVM, Burlington, VT 05401; (natural sciences) Prof. Arthur Hessler, Dept. of Biology, St. Michael's College, Colchester, VT 05404; (social sciences) Prof. William Wilson, Dept. of Political Science, St. Michael's College, Colchester, VT 05404; (short fiction) Prof. T. Alan Broughton, Dept. of English, UVM, Burlington, VT 05401; (poetry) Prof. Jeremiah K. Durick, Dept. of English, Trinity College, Burlilngton, VT 05401.

Questions may be referred to any of the above chairpersons.

The academy, which was founded in 1965 by the Rev. Francis X. Gokey and Henry Fairbanks, enables students in the colleges of Vermont to share their knowledge on almost any subject.

Approximately 20 Vermont colleges participate in the symposium each year, said Clary.

Tenants should know their rights

by Rob Swanson

If you're one of the hundred or so St. Michael's students that rents a house or apartment, you should be aware of your rights as a tenant.

Does your roof or plumbing leak? Is your landlord giving you a hard time about getting your security deposit returned? Is your dwelling inadequately insulated and weather-proofed to the point where an interior temperature of 70 degrees cannot be maintained when it is 0 degrees outside? Have you been locked out, had your privacy invaded, or just been harrassed in general by your landlord?

If any of the above sound familiar to you, there are steps that can be taken to apply pressure to your landlord to remedy any violations.

The Burlington minimum housing codes declare the right of tenants to a weatherproof, water-tight, insect and rodent-proof dwelling in good, sound working order.

The first step if you have possible violations, according to Greg Morgan, a housing advocate for People Acting for Change Together (PACT), "is to contact your landlord and try to work out any problems positively and constructively without resorting to rent withholding or other legal methods."

If the person you rent from is a black-hearted slum lord who will not listen to reason, however, then the most important consideration in dealing with the problem is to make every move through legal channels. If you try to take legal matters into your own hands, the result could be a forfeiture of your legal rights and rapid eviction from the premises.

In Morgan's words, "If you don't know the law you can get burned. It's a myth that you can't be evicted in the wintertime. If you're going to do it, then do it legally."

Vermont's Rent Withholding Law allows the tenant to withhold payment by placing it in an escrow account if a landlord fails to make proper repairs or if a health or housing officer declares that the premises violate safety or health regulations.

Once the landlord and the housing inspector have been notified of a violation, the landlord is prohibited by law from starting eviction proceedings against the tenant for 90 days.

If you feel you have been wronged by your landlord and have a legitimate complaint, you can sue in Small Claims Court.

Small Claims Court is a people's court where you don't need a lawyer. You argue the case in your own words, without legal technicalities. The rules and court procedures are simple and informal.

The maximum amount you can sue for in Small Claims Court is $250. If the amount you feel entitled to is more than $250, the case will have to be tried in District Court.

There is a charge for initiating a Small Claims suit: $5.98 for a claim under $100 and $10.98 for a claim up to $250. If the Court decides in your favor, the landlord must pay the fee.

Start the suit by figuring how much you are entitled to.

For example, if you have property that was damaged by a leaky roof, figure the amount of damage and add the cost of renting similar equipment while yours is being repaired or replaced.

If the amount is less than $250, go to Small Claims Court at 39 Pearl St. and obtain two Small Claim suit applications, fill them out and pay the fee.

You will be given a docket or case number and a copy of your complaint is sent by certified mail to the person you are bringing suit against. You will receive a court date shortly thereafter.

"The Consumer Voice" recommends several type of evidence that will be helpful in presenting your case. They are:

1) Copies of inspectors reports-building, health, police or fire

2) Copies of all correspondence with your landlord

3) Copies of rent receipts and/or all cancelled checks

4) Photographs of any pertinent damage or significant evidence

5) Witnesses or letters from witnesses

Keep your presentation short and to the point.

If you have any questions about rent withholding, Small Claims Court, the Fair Housing laws — leases, low income housing or any other related problem contact: —BTOC (Burlington Tenants Organizing Committee), 95½ North St.; —PACT (People Acting for Change Together), 97½ North St.; or—VPIRG (Vt. Public Interest Research Group).

Ambassador to talk on national issues

What sacrifices can this generation expect to make in the name of American Security? Is the United States secure now? Are our values safe? Do we have sufficient military power? Is our economy strong? These and other questions will be addressed by Ambassador John Patrick Walsh, former ambassador to Kuwait, when he speaks on "What is National Security?" Tuesday.

His address is scheduled for 7 p.m. in the recital hall of the McCarthy Arts Center. The presentation is free and open to the public.

Walsh is visiting the St. Michael's campus as part of the Air Force ROTC guest speaker program. Formerly U.S. Ambassador to Kuwait, Walsh is now state department advisor to the commander of Air University.

He received his B.S. from the University of Illinois, M.A. from Catholic University (1941), and Ph.D. from the University of Chicago (1948). Early in his career, Walsh was attached as economic officer to the American Embassies in Dublin, Ottawa and Oslo.

In the late 1950's he served as deputy director of the Office of Swiss/Benelux Affairs and was also assigned to Tehran as special assistant to the ambassador.

During academic year 1962-63 he was a fellow at the Center of International Affairs at Harvard and later became State's Deputy Director of Near East/South Asia Regional Affairs.

In 1965 he was acting executive secretary of the Department of State. After serving in Kuwait, Walsh served as diplomat in residence at Washington State University. He assumed his present post in 1973.

Time for a change

St. Michael's students are fortunate this year to have several candidates from which to choose an S.A. president. Four people are running — Joe Blanco, Mike Conway, Mike Lennon and Brian Rooke.

Three of the candidates have been involved in the student senate in the past. They are running on the basis of their records as student leaders. Unfortunately, their accomplishments leave much to be desired. Student government this year has been bogged down in committees. Its major accomplishment has been an endless stream of rhetoric.

What the student association needs is some fresh blood, a fresh approach to problem-solving. Joe Blanco is the only new face on the scene and the candidate most likely to provide some new direction.

Blanco, a transfer student, was a student leader at the community college he attended before coming to St. Michael's. At the Michaelman-sponsored forum Tuesday night, he demonstrated that he is a fluent speaker who is intelligent and well-versed on the issues. His thinking is not mired in the petty controversies that have preoccupied the senate recently.

Blanco has said that he believes the S.A. administration should take responsibility for its actions rather than blaming others for its failures. In commenting on the Aztec Two-Step concert, he said it is inconceivable that such a performance should lost $2,000. He pointed out, quite correctly, that the responsibility to promote such an event rests with the sponsoring agency, in this case, a senate committee.

Blanco would add a dimension to the twin issues of living conditions and social whirl that the present administration focuses on. He is concerned about educational matters and would have something to say about the quality of the academic offerings.

The Michaelman endorses Blanco's candidacy and hopes that the student body will banish rhetoric and let a fresh breeze dispel stale odors by voting him into office next Tuesday.

CLASS ELECTIONS

The class presidencies are at a crossroads today.

Apathy among the voters is unfortunate. But apathy among potential candidates is disastrous and makes a mockery of the positions.

There is only one candidate on the ballot for sophomore class president. But the situation is even more pathetic in the junior class — the ballot will appear blank. There is no candidate for the post.

It is not until we reach the race for senior class president that we see the hopefuls "crawling out of the woodwork." The senior class presidency carries some vestiges of prestige with it: membership on the trustees' honors committee, coordination of senior week, and liaison between the college administration and the graduating class.

But what do the freshman, sophomore and junior class officers do?

The answer is anything they want to do. It is up to the individual occupying the position to mold the office into what he or she wants it to be.

A class presidency could be a vehicle for coordinating a host of social, athletic and fund-raising activities. But this success presumes that the post is being occupied by a dynamic, popular and responsible individual.

The farce should end. Either these positions should be made viable and attractive or they should be abolished.

Letters to the editor

To the editor:

Recently I was informed of an incident that has left a black mark against St. Michael's College.

A close personal friend and classmate has been affected by an act of negligence. Thomas P. Carlson received his diploma early this year, but a week later his grade report showed that he had failed a course and is three credits shy of the 120 needed to graduate.

It seems to me that such an embarrassing situation could and should have been avoided. The college should take the time to check the grades before sending out diplomas.

Tommy Carlson and his parents deserve an apology.

In the past few years the school has been doing course and instructor evaluations. The time may have come for an evaluation of the administration. Students and faculty should have an opportunity to assess the administration's performance.

Incidents such as the one which affected the Carlson family tend to scar the memories of a college career at St. Michael's.

I hope and pray that the Student Association and the faculty will take action to insure that incidents of this type are never repeated.

Yours truly,
Richard M. Long
Vice President
Class of 1977

To the editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to address the Class of 1979. On this upcoming Tuesday, Feb. 21, you will be asked to cast a ballot for your senior class president and other various officers. I would like to remind you that senior class president is an important and lifelong position. It requires that the individual possess developed organizational skills and abilities, as well as responsibility and reliability. This is an important election that will have direct consequences on your graduation, senior class week, reunions, and various other activities, and therefore should not be a popularity contest. I hope that you will make a sincere effort, regardless of your decision, to cast a ballot for the individual that you feel is most suited for the position.

Sincerely,
Bill Gamelli
Candidate for President
Class of 1979

To the editor:

I believe that responsible journalism should cover both sides of a story. On Dec. 9 the Michaelman published a story concerning the Unification Church. Church members were accused of contacting several St. Michael's students in a "recruitment" effort. The church was not contacted by the paper concerning these charges. Since the calls were suspected of being part of a 'large-scale prank,' perhaps more investigation was in order.

How could the Unification Church be growing at the rate it is, using the "recruitment" techniques you described? Calls placed continuously to prospective members would simply turn them off. If these calls were made, they were part of a prank and not made by members of the church.

Carol Sarno '80

To the editor:

We are protesting a visit which is being acclaimed by the Western media as an important step toward bringing peace and harmony to the Middle East.

I'm protesting against Sadat, a man who has been portrayed as being a symbol of reason and moderation, a man whose only concern, as they say, is to silence the cannons of war and bring bread to his people.

I'm protesting against these reactionary settlements, peace, since it means to U.S. ruling classes the peaceful flow of oil profits to U.S. oil companies at the expense of a great majority of the Arab people, the U.S. consumers and the economies of Europe and Japan.

I'm protesting Sadat's peace which simply means transforming Egypt into a new Hong Kong. The foreign capital he is seeking will not develop Egypt or feed its people. It will go to enrich a few who will build hotels and Disneylands on the Nile as opposed to factories and infrastructure projects. "Peace" means giving Sadat's class a reign to make a buck as the local agents of U.S. multinationals.

For "peace" today means that Palestinians (who are the core problem in the Middle East) are to remain third class citizens in their own homeland or as refugees living right outside its frontiers.

For all the above reasons, I'm against Sadat's peace trip. Since the only peace can come with the creation of a democratic, secular state in the whole of Palestine for Christians, Moslems and Jews.

The only real peace will come when Arab oil and resources will be used to develop our midst and the third World as opposed to enriching a few shieks, U.S. weaponmakers and the oil companies.

The Saga of H-669

by Michael J. Donahue

H-669 . . . does that mean anything to you? It means a lot to the sponsors of that bill and it may affect you directly.

H-669 is the official name of what could be called the "Pot Bill."

What did he say?

Pot at a small Catholic college nestled snugly in the Green Mountains!? Yes, Virginia, Winooski Green is being cultivated in and around said college.

A lot of ink has been spilt over this bill, which is currently stuck in the Health and Welfare Committee of the Vermont House.

Papers which have devoted space to this proposed law are the UVM Cynic and the Vanguard (figures those hippies would waste time on a weed!).

Wait a second. Don't go having your next pot party in the quad. The bill hasn't been passed yet and as a matter of fact, it hasn't even been considered by the full House.

It seems, however, that the bill just might pass and get signed into law.

How can you say that, freak?.

I'm not the only one saying it, according to the Vanguard, ". . . endorsements of the plan by the Vermont and American Medical Association, the States Attorney's Association, the Public Defenders office, influential police chiefs . . ."

What would the bill do?

According to the Cynic, "under the proposed law (decriminalization of under an ounce) you could still be busted, but the maximum penalty is a $100 fine. The biggest change is that getting busted for a small amount would no longer be deemed a criminal offense and record of the bust would be erased after the fine is paid."

More next week. 'Til then stay high. Adios.

22 students view Paris and its problems

Notre Dame, begun in 1163, is one of the oldest, and probably most famous, gothic cathedral in the world.

by George Mendillo

During the recent Christmas break, 22 students, accompanied by Drs. William Garrett and Vincent Bolduc of the sociology department, flew to Paris as part of a sociological research project in a French community.

"The purpose of the project was to study the immigrant workers in the Paris region," Garrett said.

The course was designed to acquaint students with the major social problems of European society. All research conducted by the class was done in Paris and its suburbs.

A 90-minute class started each day and then the students broke up into sub-groups for visits to embassies, French government offices and social service agencies, Bolduc said.

At the end of the research project, each student was required to do an analysis of one aspect of the problems that the immigrant workers faced.

"There are no prerequisites for taking this three-credit course," Bolduc said. " However, some exposure to either French or sociology is recommended. Translators from the French Department were invaluable in conducting the research interviews," Bolduc said.

"This course has been offered for the past five years and will be offered again next year," Garrett said.

While in Paris the students resided in a local youth hostel and dormitory.

Commenting on her experience in France, student Denise Leville said, "This opportunity presented me with a chance to see Paris from a point of view other than that of a tourist."

Both Garrett and Bolduc were impressed with the quality of relationships that evolved among the students and "with the students' insatiable thirst to discover the excitement of such a cosmopolitan city," Dr. Bolduc added.

On the subject of Paris, Bolduc said, "While I think the course required more work than some students expected, I believe everyone enjoyed themselves tremendously. Many students regarded it as a rare blend of education, enjoyment and enchantment and Paris is a marvelous city with fascinating people."

Commenting on conclusions derived from their studies, Garrett said there are "many parallels between the problems of the immigrant workers in Paris and the problems that our ancestors probably faced when they arrived in the United States at the turn of the century can be drawn."

Students needed to plan weekend

by Jim DeMarco

Interested students are needed to work on the various subcommittees which are planning the events of Parents' Weekend, according to James P. Mallaney, co-chairman of the event's organizing committee.

The bi-weekly committee meetings are usually held Thursday nights in the snack bar. There are seven separate committees that students can volunteer for.

Paul F. Montinieri and Philip F. McGovern chair the communication committee, and David P. Pellegrino and Lisa Murphy head the Saturday night dance committee.

Beth Vetare and John Gelati are organizing the Saturday activities, Bruce J. Giantonio and Paul Patrizio are making plans for the evening banquet, and Susan M. Sochocki and Paul M. Savery are in charge of registration.

Patricia A. Devan and David W. Cebula are organizing the Sunday Mass, and M. Kathryn Cain is the weekend's fine arts chairman.

Mallaney said interested students should contact any of the chairmen for information, or to make suggestions. He said he hoped the weekend would involve more students and parents than last year's event.

The committee will send flyers to parents during the first week of March outlining the events and telling where to make reservations. Mallaney added that 350 hotel rooms have already been reserved by the committee locally at cut-rate prices.

Clary to lead study group of Shakespeare to England

by Shawn Gerety

Have you ever made the vague resolution to yourself that next summer would be different, when before you knew it, summer had breezed by and all you remembered was doggedly doing the same old thing?

Well, this summer, if the ambition hasn't yet begun to wane, you might want to seriously consider traveling to England to study Shakespearean drama.

Under the guidance of English Professor Nick Clary, a group of St. Michael's students will enroll at the University of London from July 24-Aug. 25 in a program entitled, "Shakespeare: Understanding Through Performance."

The five-week course is designed to teach participants by first-hand exposure to all aspects of drama. A select number of live performances (at least 15) given by the Royal Shakespeare Co. and other distinguished groups will be attended.

Lectures and discussions led by prominent critics, directors, actors, producers and scholars will be held on a regular basis. Daily workshops with small groups doing extensive work on particular scenes, and occasional trips to museums and galleries to familiarize students with the Renaissance Age are also a part of the summer schedule.

The complete cost for studying Shakespeare in London, excluding air-fare, lunch and dinner meals, and personal spending money (estimated at $250), is just under $800.

If desired, nine credit hours at the undergraduate or graduate level in English, drama, or Renaissance studies are available upon completion of the course.

Except for a Saturday night performance, students will have their weekends free.

The only requirement for the program is one must have some interest in William Shakespeare, his drama, the Renaissance period, or the theatre.

College readies for diamond jubilee

The dates for the 75th anniversary of St. Michael's College have been set, according to Gifford R. Hart, Jr., director of public relations.

The celebration will begin on the Feast of St. Michael, Sept. 29, 1979 and end on the Feast of St. Edmund, Nov. 16, 1980.

Hart said there are "millions of ideas for the celebration, but none are firm."

A Women's Sumposium will be conducted by Drs. Ellen Cannon, Marie Henault and Carey Kaplan from March 23-25, 1979. Women from all over the United States and Canada are expected to attend the event.

This may be regarded as the kick-off of the celebration, according to Hart, even though the symposium will "actually precede it by several months." Hart added that "this will be one of the most exciting things that ever happened on this campus."

During the next few months, it is hoped that members of the faculty and student body will give their suggestions for the upcoming celebration. Hart also expressed his hope that the current sophomore class would have some ideas since it will be the 75th class to graduate from St. Michael's.

There is also the possibility that a jubilee book about the school will be published. "Just what that would be, I don't know yet," Hart said.

He also added that he welcomes all input. He said he would be "delighted to give full consideration" to any ideas that are either called in or sent to him.

However, at the present time, the dates and the women's symposium are "virtually all that's locked in," Hart said.

Drill team wins Saranac Festival

Last year, the St. Michael's College Marching Saints made their premiere appearance at the Saranac Lake/Lake Placid Winter Festival. Saturday, the Saints returned to defend that first place finish.

The defense began two miles from the reviewing stand. The streets were lined with enthusiastic and noisy spectators. Over the parade route, the Saints impressed the crowd with their daring sabre movements.

As the team approached the reviewing stand, at the end of the parade route, the tension began to mount. However, the Saints proved up to the test as they brought the judges to their feet with two minutes worth of precision trick drill movements.

A few hours later, the Saints were awarded the first place trophy for the second consecutive year.

SMC will host women's seminar

St. Michael's College is planning a "Women and Society" symposium in March, 1979. It is a two-and-a-half-day symposium and will include approximately 60 panels of papers and discussions.

Abstracts of papers on women's issues in literature, history, political science, science, business, the performing arts, and film should be addressed to the "Women and Society Symposium, St. Michael's College."

Drs. Carey Kaplan and Ellen Cannon have been given a $2,000 grant by President Edward L. Henry for the symposium. The steering committee is made up of Drs. Kaplan and Cannon, as well as Drs. Marie Henault, Anne McConnell, and William Wilson, with Giff Hart, Dan Vecchitto, and Gay Butts.

Rooke concluded by saying that "the best campaign promise is the one that isn't made." But he promised that he would work toward increasing the "academic quality" of the college by an improved lecture series. He would also aim to upgrade the S.A. constitution.

Lennon emphasized the need for more cooperation on the part of the entire student body.

Improved quality of life for the students, according to Blanco, could be attained by working closer with the college president and the board of trustees. "The president and the trustees are not antagonistic," he said, and Dr. Edward L. Henry would probably be willing to help out in areas with temporary support for student programs.

Continuation of efficient programs, according to Conway, is necessary. He added that this could be accomplished by less personality clashes in the senate. "So many times this year, we have seen clashes in the senate that have not involved the issues but the personalities behind the issues."

Keenan and Scibelli speak

Thomas Keenan and Andrew Scibelli, the nominees for Student Association vice-president, debated each other just prior to the presidential debates Tuesday night.

Scibelli said the posts of S.A. secretary and treasurer should be filled by the Personnel and Nominations Committee, which is chaired by the vice president.

"If these positions were elected, then someone could get the job who isn't really qualified for it," he said.

First priority in the new dorms, according to Keenan, should be for seniors. After that, he added, special groups, such as students wishing to live in a quiet dorm, should be considered.

The current S.A. budget is sufficient, according to Scibelli, because most organizations and committees have surpluses. The only area he could foresee that might need an increase is the Michaelman budget, "because of increased production costs."

Keenan can see the need for more money by some committees, such as General Services and Welfare, which only receives $50, but added, "otherwise, there is not much need."

Beer bill stalled

by Kathy Martin

A decision has not yet been made by the Vermont State Senate concerning the passage of the Rathskeller bill, a bill that proposes the establishment of a means of sale of alcoholic beverages on state college campuses.

The bill, which was proposed and extensively lobbied for last year by Donald Sutton of St. Michael's, has been passed by the Vermont House of Representatives, but is still in committee in the senate.

The present law, which prohibits the sale of beer and wine on college campuses is thought by Sutton to be "not a just law," and he believes it can be changed. Sutton, supervisor of special events, has offered to appear before the Health, Education and Welfare Committee in hopes of promoting the bill further.

House bill H-129 was proposed in hopes of helping to keep students on campus and to provide a controlled and organized atmosphere for problem drinkers. An on-campus bar where students can go and socialize as a group was advocated to control the problem of students drinking in their dorms.

Opposition to the bill has been that possibly the establishment of an on-campus bar might infringe on other businesses in the area, and also that any form of drinking on campus is thought to be detrimental to college academics.

The on-campus bar, if it becomes a reality, will sell beer and food and will possibly be located in Alliot Hall, although decisions of these kind will be made by a special committee and will come at a later date.

Two vie for development post

by Mary Clare Casey

A search committee was appointed to find a candidate to fill the position of vice-president for institutional advancement, formerly held by Joe Curtin. Curtin left in October to accept a similar job at Russell Sage College in Troy, N.Y.

Members of the committee chosen by President Edward L. Henry in December are: the Rev. Raymond J. Doherty, the Rev. Leon E. Paulin, Edward P. Markey, Fred Schneider, Dr. Ellen Cannon and Maureen McNamara, chairman.

The position of vice-president includes the supervision of four departments: fund raising, public relations, alumni affairs and proposal writing.

The vice-president, who will work closely with Henry, must be knowledgeable in all areas of higher education philanthropy (annual giving, planned giving, corporate and foundation support and alumni and parents funds).

A notice was sent to faculty and administration members informing them of the opening and job description. Nominations and applications were to be sent to McNamara by Feb. 1.

Student guide nears completion

by Liz Carens

The St. Michael's College community must live by a set of rules that is rational, reasonable and realistic. It is for this reason that the current student guide is under the process of revision.

According to Edward Foley, chairman of the ad hoc Committee on Governance, the student guide must be a product of the whole college community.

This committee, set up by the Planning Commission at the request of President Edward L. Henry, consists of several sections of the college community. These include the administration, faculty, trustees, alumni, and representatives of the student association.

In organizing the new student guide, subcommittes have been formed to work on various parts. Reports from them are presented to the whole committee. Ideas are then presented to the student association, whose comments are considered before recommendation is made.

The committee will make its final report to the board of trustees, but Henry is free to make individual changes, pending the adoption of the code by the trustees.

A preliminary report was submitted to the trustees during their February meeting. Foley believes the final report will be ready for the trustee meeting in May. The changes accepted then should be in force at the beginning of the fall 1978 semester.

Strokers outswim Plattsburgh, 59-53

On Feb. 11, St. Michael's varsity swim team met Plattsburgh State at Plattsburgh and emerged victorious 59-53.

The victory began with the team of Ed Redmond, Tom Burke, William Quigley and Sandy Lapinski winning the medley relay. Steve Foley won the 1,000 free and also tied the school record in the 200 fly. The 200 breaststroke went 1-2 St. Michael's with Jeff Good winning and Burke second.

Good also turned in a 2:15.2 200 individual medley, breaking his own school record. Also winning was John Robey in the 100 freestyle.

In the diving, Tina Von Oehsen won both the one meter optional and required events.

Earlier in the week, the team lost to UVM 61-34. However, individual performances highlighted the meet. Winning two events each were Von Oehsen in the one and three meter diving and Good in the 200 individual medley and 200 back. Good also broke school records in both of these events.

Also victorious were Tom Burke in the 200 free, Foley in the 200 fly, Tom Lasko in the 200 breast and the team of Good, Lasko, Foley and Robey with a record-breaking win in the medley relay.

On Feb. 4, the team lost to a strong McGill squad. Lapinski and Von Oehsen led the women with two wins each — Von Oehsen broke a school record in the three meter diving event, along with Meg Gleason's victory in the 200 free.

Good led the men with a record of 4:50.4 in the 400 individual medley and a record-tying 1:08.7 in the 100 breast.

In the final meet of the women's season against UVM, Mary Beth Russo, Lapinski and Von Oehsen led the team with two wins each. Lack of depth, however, spelled out a narrow loss for the St. Michael's women.

Cancer is often curable.

The fear of cancer is often fatal.

If you're afraid of cancer...you're not alone. But some people are so afraid that they won't go to the doctor when they suspect something's wrong.

They're afraid the doctor might "find something." This kind of fear can prevent them from discovering cancer in the early stages when it is most often curable.

These people run the risk of letting cancer scare them to death.
